

Design Choice

Low fidelity: I decided to design cart page to show the selections of the products in rows so users can easily browse through the selections. I added an address section so users can make sure that the products are delivered to the correct location. I added the total section so users can view the total amount. At the very bottom, I added two buttons to allow users to either place order or cancel order.

High fidelity: For the cart page, I decided to add green color to the edit and place order buttons to indicate to the users that they can click on them. I added a red color to the cancel order and delete buttons to make sure that the users are cautious with pressing these buttons as they will lead to deletion and irreversible changes to the cart. I added drop shadow to the sections to make it easier to identify each section of the cart. Other pages remain mostly the same.
